

The video, On the Urban, is a short documentary film that was produced in Berlin, Germany in cooperation with Humboldt-Universität zu Berlin and the BTK University of Art and Design. It was filmed by Viktor Richardsson and Cooper Blade and is a mix of the cinematic and the documentary while seeking to toe the line between realism and the poetic. The film contains voice-over that was taken from interviews with Prof. Dr. Antje Bruns and her doctoral researchers, Richard Appiah Otoo and Felipe Coelho Costa. The audio is mixed with the meditative cinematography of the city to investigate the relationships between the public (as individuals unread on modern scientific theories), the research (as a set of facts that could potentially impact the way the public looks at the urban-landscape), and the city (the subject of our video, the object of our viewing, and the area where half of humanity live their lives). It does not seek to provide an ideal view of the city as such, but rather question the preconceived ways society looks at tall buildings and paved streets. It hopes to open the city and show that the urban landscape might be more natural than we have come to believe.
